Charge to the Sons

“To you Sons of Confederate Veterans, we will submit the vindication of the cause for which we fought. To your strength will be given the defense of the Confederate soldier’s good name, the guardianship of his history, the emulation of his virtues, the perpetuation of those principles he loved and which made him glorious and which you also cherish. Remember it is your duty to see that the true history of the South is presented to future generations.”

Camp Calendar

12:30 PM Social Time

1:00 PM Meeting Starts

Please join us. All monthly meetings are held at the Schnuck's Supermarket at 12756 Olive Street Boulevard in Creve Coeur. It is approximately 1.9 miles west of I-270 on the south side of the street. Take the Olive Boulevard exit off INT 270 and go west about one mile until a half a block after you pass Mason Road, then turn left into Bellerive Plaza and at the stop sign make another slight left into the Schnucks parking lot. We have been asked to park near the Firestone Tire Store at the left end of the lot as you face the store. The "Back Stage" room is located inside the front part of the store, on the Firestone store side, about 40 feet beyond the self-checkout counters. Please note: There is prepared food available at the Deli. ONLY FOOD PURCHASED AT SCHNUCKS MAY BE BROUGHT INTO THE ROOM.

If you are interested in presenting at a program, or know of someone who is in 2018, contact Bill Napier, our Program Director.

Robert Laven gave a passionate presentation on "Price's Raid" from an independent perspective. Although his family fought on the North, it is obvious he has an admiration for Gen. Jo Shelby and Jeff Thompson. He also revealed to us that the Yankee, Gen. Curtis, had told Generals Marmaduke and Cabell, who were captured at Mine Creek, that he intended to parade them among the Jayhawkers in Kansas. A secret note from them by way of a federal orderly to Gen. Rosecrans, put a stop to the Curtis plot, which may have saved their lives, if not from extreme abuse. After the program, he had copies of his book, "A Burned Land" for sale.

Camp Website

After many years of dedicated support, the duty of webmaster passes from Andy Lewis to Brandan Kraft. We thank Andy for his talents and safe keeping of the website. Brandan is hosting the website free of charge on a new server that he will manage. The site still has the same address, www.pricecamp.org but it has a new appearance and features. A few of these features include a new database search capability (for word or string of words look up), custom made videos, viewer changeable font size, and a soon to come interface for publishing new articles. Please check the website out and Brandan would love to get your input and suggestions. At the time of this writing (March 24th) articles were still being reconstructed from the old website design.

Maj. John S. Mellon

Missouri Confederate that Identified
Cholera Germs before Louis Pasteur
By Scott Williams

John Mellon (1821-1903), was considered a founding father of the Confederate soldier's home in Higginsville, Missouri. He also organized the Southern Historical and Benevolent Association of St. Louis and the Ex-Confederate Association of Missouri. During the war he initially served in the Missouri State Guard, then transferred over to the Missouri Confederate Brigade. He was promoted to Commissary General with the rank of Major.

Not much is known about Maj. Mellon's early life. He was a native of Loudon County, Virginia. His father was a wealthy planter. At the age of 16, he ran away from home. In 1848 Mellon had gone to California, made a fortune, but returned back to his home in Pike County, Missouri. He and his first wife, Parthenia, were parents of three daughters, Virginia, Jennie, and Laura. In 1868 Parthenia died and the family soon moved to St. Louis, where Maj. Mellon would enter the real estate business. Aside from that, we know he had a brother, a Capt. Thomas J. Mellon (1822-1862), Co F, 7th Arkansas Infantry that died of an illness during the war.

One thing that set Maj. Mellon apart from other men, he was a self-taught scientist and physician. As a young man, as early as 1847, using a microscope he identified the infection of livestock by micro-organisms, which he termed, "parasites", that caused illness. During the war, while he was in charge of thousands of head of livestock, an epidemic of cholera broke out. Many soldiers became sick and were dying. Mellon employed two university professors using a very strong microscope (from Oxford University in Mississippi) to identify contaminated animals. Over the years he found a recipe for curing cholera, which saved the lives of animals and men, including himself. He found as long as the disease did not progress to the point where the patient could not swallow food, they could be saved by eating nothing but turnips. (It is known today that turnips do have strong anti-microbial properties.) During one outbreak, Mellon claimed to have saved the lives of 198 out of 200 cholera patients.

In 1866, Mellon with Maj. John N. Edwards published an article in a St. Louis Times newspaper regarding his theory of micro-organism parasites for the cause of cholera and diphtheria. It is claimed that Louis Pasteur acknowledged and received his original idea in developing his famed "germ theory". Unfortunately for Mellon he did not publish his discovery in a scientific journal and lacked the formal education of Pasteur. Pasteur received awards, money, and notoriety for his discovery, yet no public credit for Maj. Mellon. Yet Mellon helps Pasteur to connect microorganisms to human diseases, thus making a valuable contribution to science and humanity, although the world does not realize it.

Later in life, Mellon's fortune was long gone. By 1901 he offers to sell his "rare army experiences" to a New York writer as he is "very poor". It is not known that anything became of that effort. On Feb 6, 1903, after an 8-month long illness, he passed away at his home at 2945 Olive Street. At the funeral, Capt. John T. Appler of the St. Louis Ex-Confederate Veteran Association told how he shared his last handful of parched corn with Major Mellon. It was mentioned how Mellon made the first use of a pontoon bridge by Confederate forces. It was also claimed he had turned away a superior force of Union cavalry by riding twenty-two horsemen back and forth along a long bridge.

Among the veterans that attended his memorial services were, Maj. Michael K. McGrath (Confederate), Col. Edward Brodie Hull (Confederate), Dr. John A. Leavy (Confederate), John W. Wray (Confederate), Col. Celsus Price (Confederate), Patrick Ahearn (Confederate), Patrick O'Connell (Confederate), E. J. Stiles (Confederate), Lt. Col. J. O. Churchill (Union), and Capt. Ford Smith (Union).

Mellon's remains were taken to Riverside cemetery in Hannibal to be buried alongside his first wife in section C45, however it is without a headstone. Besides his widow, he left behind three daughters, and a grandson, that at the time resided in Denver, Colorado. A Confederate cross of honor was given to his grandson, John S. M. Tibbets. Note: His 2nd wife, Jennie Eliza Mellon, passed away in 24 Aug, 1923 in St. Louis and is buried at Valhalla cemetery in Bel-Nor, St. Louis County, Missouri.

An announcement that Maj. Mellon's had published in the Post Dispatch in 1875.

Attention! First Missouri Brigade!
There will be a meeting of the surviving members of the First Missouri Confederate Infantry brigade, held at the office of Maj. John S. Mellon, No. 510 Chestnut street, on next Saturday night, May 8, 1875, at 7½ o'clock. Every member of the brigade now living in St. Louis, or who may be here at that time, is expected to be present.

How clothing or tents could be water-proofed in 1861.

This formula calls for using turpentine and beeswax. Reenactors may be interested in trying this out.

From the Fayetteville Observer (Fayetteville, Tennessee), Oct 17, 1861.

A correspondent, writing on business, refers to the following mode for making cloth water-proof:

“Below is a receipt for making cloth water-proof, which I have found very useful in making water-proof clothing for my negroes to pick out cotton in when the weeds are wet from rains or dews; and for tents I would as soon have it, indeed, or would prefer it to rubber, for it is more pliant:

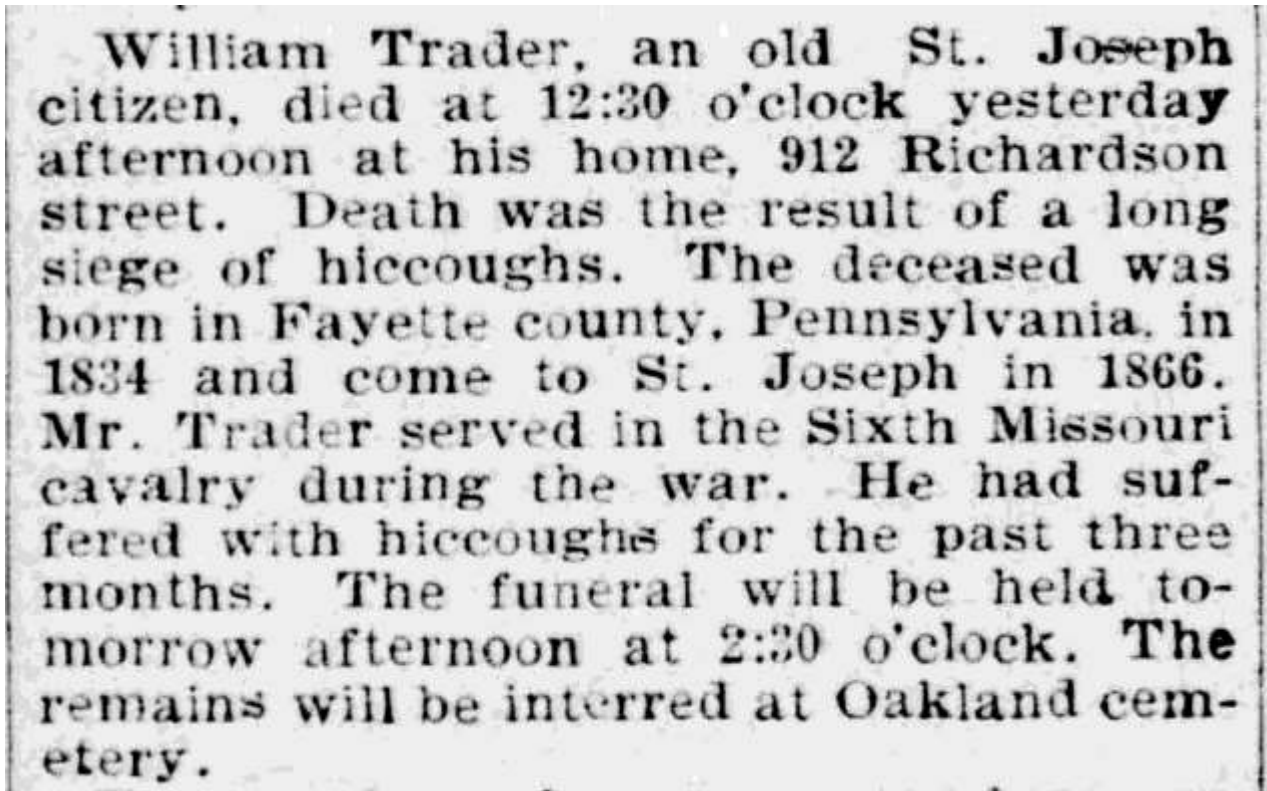

“To every gallon of spirits turpentine put  $2\frac{1}{2}$  pounds of beeswax, boil it well in a pot, remove the fire, and while it is hot put in your goods; move it about until it is well saturated, then hang it up to dry. It will require one gallon of turpentine to every eight yards of goods.”

Oddities from the Past

Dies from "Siege of Hiccups", Union Veteran, 6th Mo Militia Cavalry. St. Joseph, Missouri.

William Trader, an old St. Joseph citizen, died at 12:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at his home, 912 Richardson street. Death was the result of a long siege of hiccoughs. The deceased was born in Fayette county, Pennsylvania, in 1834 and come to St. Joseph in 1866. Mr. Trader served in the Sixth Missouri cavalry during the war. He had suffered with hiccoughs for the past three months. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The remains will be interred at Oakland cemetery.

From Hale City, Carroll County, Missouri, 1893.

(If one of our readers knows the identity of Captain Bates or the back-story of this relationship, the editor would appreciate hearing it)

Captain Bates of Hale City, formerly of the Confederate army, has been made an honorary member of the Twenty-seventh Illinois volunteer infantry and has been assigned to the command of Company C.

Capt. Martin Van Buren Bates

Born Nov 9th, 1837* at Whitesburg, Letcher County, Kentucky. Enlisted as a Private in the Kentucky Cavalry, CSA. The son of John W. and Sarah Bates. His father was only 6'2" and mother, 5' 1". He enlisted to defend the principle of States rights. Bates' tombstone reads, "1st Lieut., Co A 7th BTT Conf Cav, CSA." In a short autobiography, Bates reports he first served in the 5th Kentucky Infantry, under Col. John S. Williams, and served until 1863 when he became a Lieutenant in Co A, Virginia State Line Troops until it was merged into the 7th Confederate Cavalry CSA under Col. Clarence Prentiss where he would be promoted to a Captain and serve until the end of the war. He states his "army experience served to bring into active use every muscle of the body and to enable me to endure hardship." He had a brother killed at Vicksburg. He died Jan 7, 1919 Seville, Medina County, Ohio where he is buried in Mound Hill cemetery. * Tombstone reads birth in 1837 but according to his autobiography he claims it was in 1845. In addition, several newspaper accounts state he enlisted at age 16, which would support the 1845 date.

Carried 4-Pound Watch.

WHILE the latest thing in watches is the thin, round or octagon gold timepiece, Capt. Martin Van Buren Bates, who died recently at Seville, O., wore a watch that weighed four pounds. It was set with diamonds and a delicate set of chimes sounded the hours. The watch, which the owner carried in a vest pocket, was a gift from Queen Victoria.

Capt. Bates was a famous giant. He stood seven feet four inches, and weighed 380 pounds. He was born in Eastern Kentucky and served as a soldier in the command of Gen. John Morgan, the Confederate cavalry leader. He later toured the world with a circus with his first wife, Annie Swan, who was eight feet tall.

Missing Southern Veterans.

Perhaps one of the saddest effects of the late war which yet remains is the great number of people who are still missing from their former homes and their old friends and relatives. For instance, writes a St. Louis ex-Confederate: I had an uncle who came home shortly after Appomattox. He arrived about 3 o'clock one afternoon at his home in Kentucky, dismounted, and kissed his wife fondly, scarcely speaking and very moody. Then mounting, remarked,—

“Mary, I'm going off for a little while; be good to yourself and the baby until I come back.”

He has never been seen by a relative since. We have indirectly heard of him a number of times, but on going to the point where he had been seen he had, invariably, just left. We traced him to a point in Dakota, finally, where he had established quite a large sheep ranche, but a week before his nephew got there his uncle had sold at a great sacrifice and left.

Southerners can relate hundreds of such cases from personal knowledge. There are secluded regions in the Ozark country which are inhabited only by these broken-hearted men, now hermits, self-isolated from society and their relatives. These fastnesses seclude many a husband of a supposed widow, or father of children who have mourned him as dead for more than a quarter of a century.

In “Missing Southern Veterans”, although the editor has no medical credentials, this may be an example of soldiers suffering with post-traumatic stress.

A Missing Link

Published by the Clarion-Ledger, July 19, 1892.

A Mississippi Confederate survivor published a letter seeking information as to a Federal who succored him when wounded. The letter reached the person sought, but the writer failing to furnish his name or address, the two are as far apart as before. Now, the Federal in the case, James Hill, of Cascade, Dubuque county, Iowa encloses a copy of said letter and requests The CLARION to republish the same. He says in conveying this request:

I have been deeply anxious ever since the battle was fought near Magnolia Church, Port Gibson, Miss. In May 1863, to know whether the said Confederate soldier lived. I found him in an opening, in a grove on Mr. Shafner's estate, in what I supposed a dying condition. I cared for him so far as I was able to do. Could you aid me in any way to find said soldier, I would be gratified. So far I have failed doing so, although I have published the facts in the Atlanta's Constitution and in the Courier Journal.

The Confederate Letter

"While I was engaged in the civil war at Port Gibson, Miss. I fell victim to the ill-fortune of war. I was severely wounded in my right lung, which rendered me unable to speak audibly and while in this condition there came to me an unknown friend, clad in blue, who showed me exceeding kindness.

After he administered to my thirst I surrendered my arms, and learning of my desires, he had me placed upon a litter and carried by unwilling men to a church nearby. There I was cared for until I was able to get elsewhere. In giving my details I will state that this friend did not carry me from the battlefield when he first found me, but left me for a while, telling me that he would return, and rendered me the above mentioned service.

Comparatively speaking, this man was my enemy, yet I am partially indebted to him for my present existence. Had it not been for that noble heart, that beat within his bosom I never would have been carried from the battlefield. More than once, the bearers of the litter complained of my weight and expressed their desire to carry men who would survive. I was too badly wounded to take any note as to the features of this friend, and as a result have no idea as to his general appearance, but think he was a non-commissioned officer and belonged to the infantry.

I belonged to the Sixth Mississippi Infantry, Company E, and we fought the Twenty-ninth Wisconsin regiment in our front. It is very seldom we experience a manifestation of such love and respect from a foe, and if the doer of that noble act is still living and can remember the expression as well as the act and will respond, I will be much gratified. If he has passed over the trials of this world and gone to try the realities of the unknown, I can only wish him peace, bliss and happiness. The Almighty power saw proper to spare me, and to allow me to re-unite with the Confederates and to return to my much loved country and raise a family that prides in the Sunny South as did their sire.”

Note: The Atlanta Constitution had earlier published this Confederate soldier’s letter, on November 1, 1891. Although the Constitution’s letter was not read or responded to by the Federal soldier, unlike the Clarion-Ledger, it did identify the Confederate and his address. He is “E. M. Talbot of Rochester, Jackson Parish, Louisiana.” I was able to track down his identification thanks to a blog entitled, “Mississippians in the Confederate Army”. His full name is Edward Middleton Talbot. In 1860 he was living in Neshoba County, Mississippi. After being wounded he was not able to return to his Mississippi unit but hitched up with the 28th Louisiana Infantry. After the war he remained in Louisiana and operated a small farm. He died April 1, 1922 and is buried in Jonesboro cemetery, Jonesboro, Louisiana.

Now regarding to the federal soldier, James Hill, he was a Lieutenant, acting quartermaster of Co I, Twenty-First Iowa Infantry. On top of that he was awarded the Medal of Honor for his action at the Battle of Champion’s Hill. He later became an Army chaplain, and after the war, a Baptist minister. He died Sept 22, 1899 and is buried at Cascade, Iowa.

Confederate encampment in Corinth, Mississippi. Painted by Conrad Wise Chapman, a Confederate Virginian that served with the 3rd Kentucky Infantry.
